Cialis.

Cialis (tadalafil) has been specially designed for the treatment of impotence, a more exact term for this condition being erectile dysfunction. Erectile dysfunction is treatable in most cases, and taking Cialis along with sexual stimulation works for the absolute majority of patients. You will need to make sure you take Cialis exactly as recommended and avoid using too much of this drug to avoid such overdose symptoms as chest pain, nausea, irregular heartbeat, feeling light-headed, and fainting. Your doctor needs to know if you are using any of the following medications before prescribing Cialis: HIV/AIDS medicine, conivaptan, diclofenac, isoniazid, heart or blood pressure medications, antidepressants, rifampin, imatinib, seizure medications, antifungal medications, antibiotics, or doxazosin, as some of them can affect the success of your treatment. Cialis must never be combined with nitrates drugs used for the treatment of chest pain. Dangerous and potentially lethal interactions have been reported. Take each dose of Cialis with a full glass of water and avoid sharing this medicine with other people. You will need to make sure you are using Cialis exactly as prescribed – as otherwise you are not going to benefit from the treatment as much.
